"IF you want the news, read the ANGLO-AMERICAN"—quoted by J. Mastella Clarke in the Two Republics June 25th.

WANT HAYTI WHIPPED.

The Globe-Democrat, the best paper with the largest circulation of any other paper printed in the central part of the United States, referring to a telegram sent from this city speaking of the indignation of the Mexican people over the Haytian affair editorially says:

"We would be glad to see Mexico administer the punishment to Hayti which it threatens for the Haytian insult to the Mexican Minister. But we don't want to see any interference in Hayti by a European Power."

It is plain that the press of the United States to a unit is with Mexico in this outrage and would give its moral support to a movement looking to the punishment of President Hippolyte for the insult to this republic.

The Theatres.

The Zane Marionette company, under the management of empresario Luis Halberstadt has met with marked success at the Principal theatre. The programmes presented on Saturday and Sunday were well received by the public. On Saturday night there was a good house and yesterday afternoon there was not standing room, the house being crowded to repletion. The show is a good one and will be patronized in a way that will make Mr. Halberstadt happy.

Orrin's Theatre.—The special feature of the performance last evening was the addition to the play "Puebla a Mexico" of a scene representing Orrin's Circus. There was standing room only and not much of that.

If rain does not interfere there will be large crowds of people in the Paseo de la Reforma this afternoon.

A STRANGE FASCINATION.

A Cuban Falls in Love with a Marionette.

One of the most curious incidents of strange fascination that has ever come to the ears of the writer has just been reported in this city. It appears that when the Zane Marionette company opened its season in Havana some weeks ago the attention of the management was attracted to a young man some twenty or twenty-one years of age who frequented the front row of the Albisu theatre every time a performance was given and persisted in sending bouquets which he instructed his servant to be delivered to the blonde young lady with the blue dress taking a leading part in one of every play presented. The servant after the first two or three bouquets had been delivered was told that the young lady that his employer was enamored of, was merely a piece of wood. This however failed to convince the young Cuban who continued to send the floral offerings and occupy a seat in the front row of the theatre at each performance. Upon inquiry it was found the young man was the son of a rich tobacco planter of Vuelta Abajo, holding in his own right large sums of money and two or more plantations. In the concluding days of the season of the Zane company in Havana the young man frequented the stage door of the theatre and demanded that he be allowed to see the blonde young lady. Of course this was impossible as she did not exist in flesh and blood but was solely represented by wood, cloth and paint. He was told this repeatedly but still he insisted upon seeing her. When the company set sail for Vera Cruz, lo and behold upon the same steamship was the young Cuban, attended by his mozo. At Vera Cruz his attentions to the Marionette were continued greatly to the discomfiture of Empressario Halberstadt, who tried every known method to disabuse the young man of his wild and most unseemly fascination. But it was of no use. Bouquets still flowed to the stage door with letters for the blonde young lady. The Cuban followed the company to Orizaba thence to this city and those who were at the afternoon performance yesterday had they looked carefully would have seen a beautiful bouquet of choice flowers in the orchestra with a card addressed to the "blonde young lady," which had been delivered there at an early hour by the mozo of the young Cuban.

Mr Halberstadt refused to give the name of the young man, stating that it might be awkward for his family to learn of his most peculiar fascination. Mr. Halberstadt was to have another interview with the young man to-day. If he still persisted in his attention to the blonde puppet he was going to present it to him so that he would leave the city and not cause the management any more cause for worry.

A Lakeside Meeting.

The meeting of Executive Committee of the Lakeside Club on Saturday evening last was a very busy meeting. It was decided to use medals instead of cups hereafter, and authority was given to have them made. The Secretary and Treasurer, Messrs Phillips and Sommer, were authorized to have the dues collected from the members up to and including December of the current year. Votes of thanks were rendered to the following energetic Lakesiders who have recently lent distinguished services to the Club: Messrs. W. Clarke, E. Harris, J. A. Verger and Jose Algara. Thanks-resolutions were also carried in favor of Sr. Iñigo, owner of Lake Chalco, General Carrillo, military commander, and General Carballeda, chief of police, for favors of bands and police; also to the ANGLO-AMERICAN and The Two Republics for press notices and other courtesies. An interesting matter then occupied the attention of the meeting; to wit; the erection of a boat-house at Mexicaltzingo. The Committee, Jones, Verger and Phillips, reported having made a trip to La Viga and found there was plenty of water for purposes of practice, but not for regattas. It was decided to get estimates for the cost of a boat house 45x30 at Mexicaltzingo. It was decided further that the annual fouroared race; to be the great event, is to be kept on record. The olive grove at Ayotla is to be at once seeded, so that the daucers at the next regatta meeting of the Club may have a handsome carpet of velvety grass on which to "trip the light fantastic." A vote of thanks to Rev. I. D. Sherlock for the new outriggers was also passed most enthusiastically.

An Enjoyable Musicale.

The Æolean Literary Society held a most enjoyable musicale on Saturday night at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Webb, This society was organized six weeks ago, and has the following members: Misses H. P. Webb, President; Louise Miller, Secretary; Alice Jacobs, Treasurer; also Misses Browne, Blake, Barnard, Hoeck, Watkins and Woolston. Selections were played at the musicale on the piano by Misses Webb and Blake, and Misses Barnard and Watkins, both couples playing duets, the first "Semiramis" and the second "In the Woodland." Miss Woolston recited "The Kentucky Belle," and Miss Webb "A Sailor's Life." Misses Jacobs and Miller sang "I Love my Love" most charmingly. Mr. E.C. Butler sang on old English ballad,

Mr. Fred. Newman delivered an Irish character sketch as a recitation, which took immensely. Mr. Day played Wienaski's "Legende" on the violin, accompanied by Mrs. E. C Butler on the piano. Mr. Gore sang as usual splendidly; he sang "Expectancy." Mr. R. B. Palmer played some darkey melodies on the banjo. The feature of the evening was the appearance of Mr. Byrd in recitation; subject "Rubenstein." He is a magnificent declaimer and highly dramatic, besides possessing a splendid voice. The society can be complimented on a most excellent musicale. The ladies meet every Saturday morning at nine o'clock and devote one half hour to history and one half hour to fiction, reading by turns.

An Appeal for Money to the Public.

The Board of Directors of the Young Men's Christian Association is out in the following Circular which should be carefully read, and promptly acted upon by all who are interested in aiding a good cause.

"The Board of Directors of the Young Men's Christian Association of Mexico City request your careful consideration of the following statement:

After releasing the Association from all obligations in our former hall and completing the necessary repairs in our present quarters, meanwhile paying current expenses, we find the Association still owing a balance of Five Hundred Dollars.

According to present arrangements, the proceeds from the use of our rooms by others bring our current expenses within the amount of annual dues from members, leaving however no balance for liquidating debt.

According to our By-laws the object of the Women's Auxiliarly is 'To assist the Association in its work among young men by helping to make the rooms attractive and home-like, and aiding in receptions and entertainments,' and they should be at liberty to determine the objects to which their funds may be applied.

In the line of their aims, there are needed furniture for the department of refreshments, additions to the library and periodical list, a carpet for the main hall, and the possession of a good piano would contribute to economy as well as to pleasure.

None of these improvements can be undertaken by the Board of Directors while the debt remains unpaid.

A young Men's Christian Association, characterized by energetic business principles in our own countries, should not be in debt. It should be free to go forward. Hence an opportunity is now offered to all members, and friends of this Association to aid in the removal of this burden.

Let each one assess himself; in view of all that his own Christian associations, in a wide and deep sense, have been to him in his past life, and in view of what he desires this Association to be to the young men of our home-lands, in Mexico to-day. 'Freely'—'Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give.' For the Board of Directors,

H. P. HAMILTON,
D. C. SMITH,
Committee."

AN ENJOYABLE BALL.

The Anglo-American Colony of San Luis Meet at a Party.

SAN LUIS POTOSI, June 26th, 1891.

The event of the week in the Anglo-American colony has certainly been the ball on Thursday night, given by the ladies residing at the Hotel Continental, whose hospitality was liberally supplemented by the popular proprietor Mr. F. E. Behan.

The handsome hotel buildings were admirable adapted to accomodate the large number of guests who responded to the invitations. They (the guests) were, however, hardly prepared for the transformation scene which greeted them on entering. Skillful hands and artistic taste had combined to produce what appeared like a Fairy Palace. Myriads of lights illuminated the patio and galleries—Chinese lanterns of varied hues, contrasting with rows of lamps arranged to produce the national colours of Mexico and the United States, alternately.

The reception room and ladies' boudoir were luxurious to a degree which defies description, and reminded one of the royal pavilions provided for the accommodation of those favorites of fortune, who, while travelling about their domains are graciously pleased to occupy such places for a few moments.

Dancing was carried on in the dining rooms, the graceful architecture and handsome gilding of which were admirably set off by a profusion of bunting. The green, white and red of Mexico occupied the position of honour in the centre, flanked on either side by the Stars and Stripes, while the Union Jack of Old England was prominent at the top of the room.

It was about 9.30 when the first strains of the band invited the dancers to sort themselves and commence their graceful exercises, and it was 4.30 a. m. before the last strains died away. During these hours the only intermissions were for the discussion of ice creams, sandwiches and cakes, and those cooling beverages which are never more appreciated than on such occasions.

Space will not allow of giving the names of the 90 or more persons who were present, but the following list will show that the Anglo-American colony was represented by its most prominent members, while our Mexican friends gave evidence of the cordiality existing amongst the nationalities. United States Consul J. P. Turnbull, wife and Miss Turnbull; Mr. J. L. Williams, Division Superintendent National railroad; Mr. McKay, Division Superintendent Central railroad; Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Nichols, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Page, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Schmieding, Mr. and Mrs. S. James, Mr. and Mrs. J. Finley, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Smithers, Messrs. J. Affantranger, E. L. Curtis, E. H. Friday, J. Howell, Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson, Mr. and Mrs. Keisheimer, Messrs. H. H. Craidley, Ibert, Robinson, G. Front, J. A. Fitzsimmons, J. H. Hampson, T. E. Behan, F. Pearce, Hudson, D. C. Upson, Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. O. Brennan, Mr. and Mrs. North, Mr. and Mrs. Ordens, Mr. and Mrs. Checkridge, Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Meade, Mrs. Wiggings, the Misses Edgar and Mr. Poole, Sr. and Sra. Before closing this description it becomes a duty to congratulate the ladies, who residing at the hotel, initiated and carried out such a successful entertainment, and to express a hope that it will prove the commencement of a bond of friendship which will unite our English speaking community more closely than ever before. The ladies to whom honour is due, are: Mrs. O. Brennan, Mrs. J. Finley, Mrs. Scott James, Mrs. W. C. Nichols, Mrs. Keisheimer and Mrs. F. Smithers.

Fanny Kemble once wrote, "You ask me if the American men are like the English. No. American gentlemen are a cross between the English and French men, and yet really altogether like neither. They are more refined and modest than Frenchmen and less manly, shy and rough than Englishmen. Their brains are finer and flimsier, their bodies less vigorous and robust than ours. We are the finer annimals and they are the subtler spirits. Their intellectual tendency is to excitement and insanity, and ours to stagnation and stupidity.

White tar is one of the latest inventions or discoveries. It will not become soft under the sun's rays in any climate, and is expected to be used largely in calking the deck seams of fine yachts.
